Screenings to be held in Palo Alto, Aquarius Theatre, 430 Emerson Street

Palo Alto, CA. - In a continuing effort to achieve a broader impact in promoting social change through education, UNAFF will engage both the parents and children of the elementary school level. A matinee event in Palo Alto with a program specially tailored for young children, where we will screen two shorts and two longer films on topics ranging from the endangered species; a young Indian entrepreneur, kids learning that peace is not a utopian dream and American Children's Chorus in China.

After the screenings kids and parents are invited to spend time at the special event in front of the theatre and learning how to play the World Game while enjoying entertaining and educational demonstrations from stunt groups and special effects professionals.

HOME FOR HAWKSBILL

(29 minutes) Australia/USA

Director: Jordan Plotsky

Producers: Jordan Plotsky, Richard Hamilton

HOME FOR HAWKSBILL tells the remarkable story of how rival tribes overcame cultural conflicts and disputes over land ownership to protect the precious Arnarvon Islands and save the near extinct Hawksbill turtles. Their success inspired others, and is now a model for conservation throughout the world.

Screening at 2:00PM

WAHID'S MOBILE BOOKSTORE

(11 minutes) India/USA

Director/Producer: Anjoo Khosla

Follow 9-year-old mobile bookseller, Wahid, as he skillfully recommends and sells international bestsellers to the more privileged. Wahid barely reads English but he is a craftsman at selling books. Among the traffic, smog, blaring horns and careening commuters that crowd the intersections of Mumbai, India he deftly weaves in and around the cars haggling over the price and recommending books to patrons sitting in their air-conditioned cars and tries to make enough money to help provide for a family of six. Filmmaker present

The following film will be screened at Stanford University, Memorial Auditorium, 551 Serra Mall

SING CHINA

(72 minutes) China/USA

Director/Producer: Freida Lee Mock

SING CHING looks behind the scenes at the Los Angeles Children's Choir, chronicling its groundbreaking tour of China. Following the chorus' 60 members-- all 11-17 years old-- Filmmaker, Mock, not only captures the excitement and drama of performance, but also paints a portrait of a changing China. Internationally acclaimed, the Los Angeles Children's Chorus includes youth from over 50 diverse communities across Los Angeles and has traveled around the world, bringing its young ambassadors of American culture from Brazil to Australia. In the chorus' first trip to China, Mock captures the intimate moments of their rehearsals and performances, and also their interactions with host organizations and fellow Chinese singers. co-presented with Stanford Institute for Creativity and the Arts, Stanford Department of Music, Stanford Lively Arts, School of Education, FACES and FLICKS Filmmaker present
