Grandmother to Grandmother: New York to Tanzania

Directors/Producers: Anne Macksoud, John Ankele

(56 minutes) Tanzania In sub Saharan Africa, AIDS is wiping out a generation of parents, leaving thirteen million orphans behind. Many of the grandmothers, impoverished by the epidemic, have rescued these children from the streets and are struggling to raise them. A similar thing is happening in cities all across America. This film introduces two outstanding projects—one in the Bronx, one in Tanzania. This film will inspire ordinary people to become visionaries, creating their own solution in their own communities, helping to lift the heavy burden carried by millions of grandmothers.

(Film screened at UNAFF)
