TERMS AND CONDITIONS MAY APPLY (USA)

Admit it: you don't really read the endless terms and conditions connected to every website you visit, phone call you make or app you download. But every day, billion-dollar corporations are learning more about your interests, your friends and family, your finances and your secrets. These corporations are not only selling the information to the highest bidder, they freely share it with the government. And you agreed to all of it. With fascinating examples and so-unbelievable-they're-almost-funny facts, filmmakers expose what governments and corporations are legally taking from you every day –making the future of both privacy and civil liberties uncertain. Directed by Cullen Hoback. 7:00pm at Stanford University School of Education CERAS Building, Room 101, 485 Lasuen Mall. Panel discussion to follow "Future of Online Privacy"

SPIES OF MISSISSIPPI (USA)

Hundreds – if not thousands – of white student activists from the North are preparing to link up with dozens of black freedom workers in the Magnolia State to accomplish what the Mississippi power structure fears the most: Registering black people to vote. Directed by Dawn Porter. 9:20pm at Stanford University School of Education CERAS Building, Room 101, 485 Lasuen Mall. FILMMAKERS PRESENT
