January 9, 7PM

Rinconada Library

Inequality for All reminds us that democracy is not a spectator sport and that the divide between rich and poor is growing in the United States. In this timely and entertaining documentary, noted economic policy expert Robert Reich takes on the enormous question of what has been happening to our economy. He distills the story through the lens of widening income inequality—currently at historic highs—and explores what effects this increasing gap has not only on our economy but our democracy itself. Director: Jacob Kornbluth.
